Frisco Resident Shot January 1; Suspect Sought

(January 2, 2006) On Jan. 1, 2006, at about 8:11 p.m., Frisco Police received a call about a shooting that occurred in the 7100 block of Hickory.

The victim, Carlos Contreras, 34 of Frisco, was shot in the stomach with a small caliber handgun. Early information from witnesses led police to believe that the suspect was still inside a nearby apartment. Residents around the area were evacuated for their own safety and negotiators attempted to make contact with the persons inside.

After no contact could be made, the Special Operations Unit made entry using a diversionary device, but found the apartment empty.

Detectives are interviewing several people to determine what precipitated the chain of events.

The victim underwent surgery and his injuries are not believed to be life threatening.

The investigation continues.
